CITY AND NEIGHBORHOOD.

The close of the Symphony orchestra meason at the Thentre Wednesday night draw the audience that such events usually attract—one not large in size but thoroughly representative, appre-ciative, critical in a friendly way, stu-dious and intent, the sort of andlence that forms a higher tribute to an artist than and bolsterous crush could do. The programme was full of charm and interest. The soloists, Mrs. Edward McGurrin as harpist, Miss Ellerbeck, planist and Hugh Dougall, baritone, did excellent work, while the orchestra under Arthur Shepard was splendid.
